Road Probers Request Governor To Appear as Witness in State Highway Investigation.

SLATE IS PLACED ON WITNESS STAND

Expense Accounts, Auto Costs, Salary Advances, Lax Bookkeeping Methods Under Fire.

Governor Clifford Walker will be requested to explain to the special senate highway probe committee the reasons for his break with John N. Holder, chairman of the state highway commission, and his subsequent removal of Holder from office, Senator J. R. Hutcheson, chairman of the committee, announced Thursday following a meeting of the investigation body.

There is no power to compel attendance by the governor and no means will be employed to induce him to appear against his will, but he simply will be asked to attend, Senator Hutcheson said. By attending, he would be subject to cross-examination by members of the accused department, it was stated.

Attendance Small. With Chairman Holder, of the highway commission, absent, the investigation got under way Thursday with scant attendance. John R. Phillips, newest member of the commission, was present, but, as he sat, merely as a spectator. W. R. Neel, state highway engineer, was the only active member of the department at the hearing.

The hearing will be resumed at 3 o'clock this afternoon, with Lelloy Pharr, accountant in the office of John J. Slate, state auditor, present to represent Mr. Slate, who will be out of the city. Thursday found Mr. Slate the first witness, with Senators Hutcheson, Collier, Carswell, Dixon and Andrews, the entire committee, in attendance. Mr. Slate was placed under oath by Senator Hutcheson, and then was queried concerning alleged illegal expenditures of the highway department.

Trend of Thursday's hearing was along the lines of Auditor Slate's report on the highway department, he being asked by the committee to explain certain passages in the report. Owing to the intricate nature of the testimony, Mr. Slate was allowed to call in his assistant, Mr. Pharr, who also was sworn.

They occupied the witness stand together and went deeply into the audit figures.

Attacking records of the department, Auditor Slate said there was no way he could strike a balance, as there was no inventory to show the property of the department. Mr. Pharr said there was very little record showing equipment dispensed from the supply depot, nor was there any running inventory or anything to show the amount on hand at any time unless one actually counted the articles. He said inventory forms had been recommended and that work was begun but later suspended. He characterized the methods of the department in this phase as "certainly not systematic."

Auditor Slate criticized the bookkeeping methods of the highway department, saying that the expense accounts, auto costs, salary advances, and lax bookkeeping methods were under fire.

UNUSUAL SIGNS OF PROGRESS SEEN IN SOUTH GEORGIA

Southern Section of State Is Beehive of Activity as Money Pours in From Bumper Crops.

TOBACCO ONLY ONE OF MANY CROPS

Melon Yield Is Fine—Tobacco Will Bring $15,000,000 and Farmers Have Money During Summer.

BY PAUL STEVENSON, Staff Correspondent. Thomasville, Ga., July 30.—The story of the most wonderful agricultural year ever enjoyed by the south Georgia section—a story featured by the immense growth of the tobacco industry to a $15,000,000 crop—was revealed in its full details in a tour of this part of the state completed here Thursday by a party of Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic railroad officials, correspondents and photographers of Atlanta newspapers.

This story, besides depicting the stupendous growth of the tobacco industry, also pertains to the full fruition of a general program of farming development which is nothing short of amazing. A development in cotton, in corn, in melons and in fruit growing, which has caused all Georgia, south of Macon, to become a beehive of activity in farming, in business, in construction, in road building, in manufacturing, which is bound to bring Georgia to the front rank of all the states in the union in business expansion.

Not in future years or in future months but in future days are these big plans to be carried out. That much is certain to every visitor here. Bankers are telling of July deposits which are the greatest ever known at this time of the year. Manufacturers are telling of unexpected demands which are coming to them for their products, which are unprecedented. The manager of the big packing plant at Moultrie is telling of the immense increase in log production, which has come from the astonishing yields of corn. Traveling salesmen are swarming into the hotels in two dozen cities of this part of the state. Booms everywhere are being reported and many who recently left for other parts of the country are scurrying back to south Georgia to get in on the ground floor.

Tobacco produced on land heretofore useless for other products is being brought in by caravans to the numerous new warehouses, located in two dozen cities. It brings to the growers close to $15,000,000 surplus wealth or "pellet."

SPARKS ENDANGER MANY BUILDINGS

Great Crowd Gathers at Scene—Georgia Art Supply Co., Inc., and Other Concerns Damaged.

Washington, July 30.—(AP)—Close to the pulpit before which he worshipped in the brief years of his official life in Washington, William Jennings Bryan lay tonight, wrapped in the calm dignity of the long sleep into which he slipped so quietly at the close of his last crusade in Dayton.

There was a great peace in the face upon which thousands looked down in reverent silence as the stream of great and little folk, come to do him honor, moved slowly by through the quiet church. Among them were many who had known him in life, who had seen him in his great moments, pleading the causes he championed with a fire and eloquence that is given few men to invoke.

Features Are Softened. To these it seemed that death had touched with softening hand the familiar, rugged features; had smoothed away lines on the wide forehead, etched by the crowning years and the more than three decades of ceaseless warfare for the ideals he preached in religion and politics.

Well into the night the church doors stood open that all who would might come to stand a moment beside the bier. Again tomorrow the grieving family will share their sorrow with the public until the hour strikes for the last journey to the grave that awaits the commoner on a little hillside across the Potomac in Arlington national cemetery.

No Pomp or Ceremony. There was nothing of pomp or official ceremony about the scene in the little red brick church that long has survived the down-town bustle of a growing city. At the head and foot of the casket, which lay close against the raised step of the chancel, the motionless figure of an army comrade of the Spanish war kept ceaseless vigil, a vigil that continued after the doors had closed out the noise from the busy streets to await the coming of another day.

Beside the casket stood the first of three floral pieces that had been set in place. It was a great wreath of yellow roses, gerberas and lilies, and bore the card of the secretary of state. On the casket itself, resting on the vivid coloring of the draping flag, lay a little child, the young of the dead man's only grandchild, Ruth Meeker, of Philadelphia.

To the right of the casket stood a large floral pedestal surmounted by an open Bible worked in pink and white asters. It was the tribute to a fallen leader from the Jackson Democratic club of Washington, which bore the inscription in white blooms, "The Prince of Peace."

That was all except for the steady stream of young and old, of rich and poor, white and black Americans, who seized a moment in their busy lives to look once more on the face that had been known from ocean to ocean.

Animals in Panic. Pet animals, including chickens, monkeys, dogs, pigeons and goats, became panic-stricken by the smoke which filled the Forsyth street, owned by A. E. Archer, at 64 South Forsyth street. Due to the thoughtfulness of Captain Grover C. Fain, of the Atlanta police department, who broke in the door of the establishment and commandeered the services of pedestrians to carry cages into the streets, lives of many of the pets were saved. Monkeys, dogs and chickens

COUNCIL-MANAGER CHARTER PETITION GIVEN TO SOLONS

Fulton and DeKalb Delegations Guests of City Committee for Explanation.

FULTON DELEGATE MAY OPPOSE BILL

Tells Body He Promised To Introduce It Only Because of Many Requesting Him.

Members of the Fulton and DeKalb county delegations in the legislature Thursday were presented with a formal request of 3,335 registered Atlanta voters to authorize a referendum next May on the question of substituting a new charter, providing the council-manager form of government for that now in effect here. The luncheon at which the petition was presented was held at the Kimball house and was attended by about 200 representative citizens from all sections of the city.

Colonel E. E. Pomeroy, chairman of the citizens' charter committee, presented the sheaf of papers, which was accepted by Representative J. O. Wood on behalf of the county delegations.

Mr. Pomeroy stated that three months were consumed in preparing the charter and that because of the shortage of time it was impossible to present it for approval of city council.

Wood Accepts Petition. In accepting the petition Mr. Wood stated that he felt that any request, endorsed by so many prominent Atlantans, should receive the most careful consideration and that he would recommend this course to his associates. However, he reserved the right to fight the charter when it comes before the people, explaining that he is not altogether in sympathy with it.

Councilman Horace Russell, who has been a leader in the movement for a new charter, explained the outstanding differences between the present and proposed forms of government. Principal advantages of the council-manager form, he said, are that it will reduce the personnel, will concentrate executive power and will, to a large extent, eliminate present political "hangarons" who hold appointive offices.

The new charter would reduce the number of council members from 36 to 15, with one from each ward and three from the city-at-large, all of whom, however, would be elected by the city-at-large. It would abolish the 30 existing departments of government and consolidate them in seven, fixing the executive power in the city manager, who would be elected by council and who could be recalled by council at any time.

The school department would be under a board of seven members, elected by the people, while the library would be directed by five commissioners named by council. Zoning, paving and other provisions of the charter, which now function satisfactorily, Mr. Russell said, would be unchanged by the new charter.

Mr. Russell stated that regardless of the merits of a charter, the legislature should authorize an election on any charter when requested by as large a number of responsible citizens as have signed the petition. If the

'Round-the-World University To Make Year's Tour of Globe

450 STUDENTS TO SAIL ON S. S. UNIVERSITY

BY ROBERT D. LUSK. New York, July 30.—A college so efficient that its campus can be backed right up to the subject of the professor's lecture will open its first term here October 1 with 450 sea-going students prepared to participate in the latest development in higher education aboard the "Round-the-World University."

"After crossing the Alps, Hannibal dropped down into Italy," the round-the-world professor will drone to his classes, adding—and this is what makes the new university unique—"Italy may be seen through the port-holes of the starboard side."

That, in principle, will be the way the new school, the S. S. University, will function, according to authorities of New York university, which is sponsoring the enterprise in cooperation with other universities throughout the country.

The floating university will open its sessions in New York this fall, and close its first term at the same place on June 1, after the institution of higher learning has circumnavigated the globe and visited nearly every country there is to visit en route. Classes will be conducted on shipboard and also on land during the frequent stops.

This novel venture in the realms of education has already brought about one radical change in the field of pedagogy. It has solved the problem of professors' salaries. Whereas until now, it has been customary for professors to complain about measly wages, more than 1,100 of them, many leaders in their chosen work, have offered their services to the S. S. University and have been so anxious to get on the teaching staff that they agreed to overlook the item of pay. However, the 40 professors selected will be paid for their work.

The S. S. University will be completely equipped. An 18,000-ton steamer will be converted into a combination dormitory and schoolhouse. A gymnasium, with physical instructors, medical advisors and nurses will take care of the physical needs of the

BOOTLEGGER KING BORN IN GERMANY

OFFICIALS STATE

Tells Investigators That His Father Was Naturalized While He Himself Was Still a Minor.

LACKS DOCUMENTS TO PROVE CLAIM

Chicago and Cincinnati Immigration Officers Enlisted in Probe by M. A. Coykendall.

Federal authorities in Atlanta, Cincinnati and Chicago are investigating the citizenship record of George Remus, millionaire Cincinnati bootlegger, with deportation proceedings in view, it was stated here Thursday night.

Remus, it was learned, was born in Germany, where his father also lived for years before his arrival in the United States. His claim to American citizenship rests on his statement that the elder Remus was naturalized while the son was still a minor.

In the event it should be proved that this claim of Remus to citizenship is without basis, then it is the opinion of local officials that he would be subject to deportation, at the close of his sentence in the federal prison here, September 3.

Coykendall Starts Probe. The investigation was started as a part of the routine work of M. A. Coykendall, district director of the United States immigration service.

Mr. Coykendall has held several conferences with Remus and has grilled him thoroughly upon his claims to American citizenship. Remus told him that he was the son of a German who was naturalized while the son was still a minor. Remus, however, according to Mr. Coykendall, was unable to present any documentary evidence to support his statement.

Following these conferences Mr. Coykendall sent messages to immigration offices in Cincinnati and in Chicago, asking that they investigate the statement of Remus in regard to his citizenship, and also to look into several other statements made by Remus.

Subject to Deportation. Provided that these reports should prove that Remus has no claims to American citizenship, Mr. Coykendall is of the opinion that the federal prisoner, who is now in the custody of the United States marshal here, may be deported provided that the crime occurs within five years of his last entry in the United States. Remus, it is understood, falls under this provision. It is stated that he had left the United States and entered another country within less than five years of conviction.

Mr. Coykendall is now awaiting reports to be made to him, as initiator of the probe, from Cincinnati and Chicago offices. Once this is done the case is in his hands and he will use his judgment as to what recommendations to make to Washington.

While Mr. Coykendall did not state

MARKET BUREAU FUND STIRS UP FIGHT IN HOUSE

Enemies Would Reduce Annual Maintenance To $50,000; Culpepper Leads Defense.

One of the hottest fights staged in recent years on the floor of the house of representatives developed Thursday afternoon when the item appropriating $100,000 for support and maintenance of the bureau of markets was reached during consideration of the general appropriations bill in committee of the whole. The house adjourned without voting on the matter, which will come up as first business this morning.

The debate, which was featured by bitter personal attacks involving officials of the department of agriculture and the market bureau, was extended to include the attorney general when opponents of the bureau declared that Attorney General Napier had rendered official opinions fashioned to suit the wishes of the commissioner of agriculture.

Referring to an official interpretation of an act of 1921, Representative Milner, of Dodge, asked whether, in the opinion of the house, the "elasticity of the attorney general's opinion" was to be used by the supreme court to fight the charter when it comes before the people, explaining that he is not altogether in sympathy with it.

Councilman Horace Russell, who has been a leader in the movement for a new charter, explained the outstanding differences between the present and proposed forms of government.

Principal advantages of the council-manager form, he said, are that it will reduce the personnel, will concentrate executive power and will, to a large extent, eliminate present political "hangarons" who hold appointive offices.

The new charter would reduce the number of council members from 36 to 15, with one from each ward and three from the city-at-large, all of whom, however, would be elected by the city-at-large. It would abolish the 30 existing departments of government and consolidate them in seven, fixing the executive power in the city manager, who would be elected by council and who could be recalled by council at any time.

The school department would be under a board of seven members, elected by the people, while the library would be directed by five commissioners named by council. Zoning, paving and other provisions of the charter, which now function satisfactorily, Mr. Russell said, would be unchanged by the new charter.

STRIKE OF MINERS BELIEVED AVERTED BY BRITISH CHIEFS

Government Inquiry and Offer To Subsidize Operators Regarded as Certain To Stop Row.

London, July 31.—(AP)—The government's decision to institute an inquiry into the coal industry and give financial assistance, pending the report of the inquiry committee, is generally regarded as ending the crisis.

Neither the mine owners nor the miners have made a definite statement since the official announcement was issued, but there seems to be good reasons for believing that the mine owners will agree to suspend their notices regarding decrease in wages and lengthening of hours and that the miners will accept the situation.

This viewpoint is endorsed by most of the morning newspapers today. The official statement says the miners, during the conversations to-night, told the premier that they desired to cooperate in the inquiry. They intimated that they regarded it unfair to require a reduction in wages, in view of the present cost of living, before an attempt was made at an inquiry into the difficult situation which the industry was confronted.

Early reports have it that Scott has assisted to be given the industry until spring, by which time the industry would get to the bottom of the economic difficulty of the industry and see how far the allegations made

MAGMILLAN'S SHIP IS CAUGHT IN ICE

Flagship Peary Will Attempt To Broadcast Program on Short Wave Saturday Morning.

Washington, July 30.—(AP)—The MacMillan Arctic expedition became wedged in the Melville Bay ice pack yesterday but notified the National Geographic society today that it expected to get out when the fog lifted. Coming from the flagship "Woolen," the message, dated July 29, said: "We are wedged in the Melville Bay ice pack. It was fine running until midnight. Then a thick fog necessitated a stop. At 3 o'clock the morning there was brilliant light but a haze hid the land. Our first attempt to break out halted after about a mile.

From noon until 1 o'clock we were a tortuous course through light land ice, but were again stopped by fog which left us beside a huge ice at the spot where a star bear with fifteen-inch pads had recently slid off to the water."

Large Again Denies Exodus Of Atlantans

Declares Postoffice Figures Show Only 3,300 Have Gone to Florida.

Less than 3,300 Atlantans have moved to Florida in the past two years, according to records revealed by Edwin K. Large, postmaster. Mr. Large said he issued these figures because he has been quoted as having said that from 10,000 to 45,000 have left within the past year, and to support an editorial appearing recently in The Constitution.

"Only 2,200 cards asking that Atlanta addresses be changed to Florida have been received within the last two years, according to our records," Mr. Large said. "There are about one and one-half names to the card, making about 3,300."

He commended an editorial appearing in The Constitution July 26, written to refute a report that more than 40,000 Atlantans have left for Florida within the past year. The editorial congratulated Florida on its phenomenal growth and predicted the greatest era of prosperity in the history of Georgia, saying that Georgia would benefit by the growth and prosperity of her sister state.

GOLDIN TO SERVE TERM IN PRISON

Prison Commission Says Body Is Without Authority To Place 14-Year-Old Boy in Reformatory.

Buchanan, Ga., July 30.—(Special)—That Hoke Goldin, 14-year-old boy, convicted here today of voluntary manslaughter in connection with the death of his father, and sentenced to serve from 5 to 10 years in the penitentiary, will be required to serve his term in prison instead of being placed in a reformatory as was suggested by the presiding judge, officials of the Georgia prison commission stated today.

"If the verdict of the jury was guilty and the sentence of the court was for a prison term, the prison commission is without authority to change the sentence, as to the place of servitude, a member of the prison commission stated, when apprised of Judge Irvin's statement that, on account of the youth of the defendant, he thought it would be the duty of the prison commission to designate if the boy should serve at the state farm or in a reformatory."

The verdict against young Goldin was returned early today, after the jury had received the case at 7:30 o'clock last night. Few persons were in the courtroom, shortly before 8 o'clock, when the jury filed in and reported the verdict of "guilty of voluntary manslaughter." The youth trembled slightly as he faced the judge and received the sentence of from 5 to 10 years. Afterward he said that he thought the juryman did wrong to punish him, but added that after his prison term was ended he

Charleston Fox Trot Picked To Be Next Dance Sensation

WIGGLE AND TWIST ARE MAIN CHARACTERISTICS

BY HAROLD ANDREWS. Chicago, July 30.—The beautiful little, dumb-bell, who would rather wear last month's hat than sit out a dance, will be seen on the waxed floors this winter in the Charleston fox-trot, a distinctly 1925 creation, bearing absolutely no relation to the deuced dance of the same name.

The dancing masters proceeded on the theory that what the demons of the dance want now is a wiggle and a twist. The wiggle is to be done to some extent by the toes. But not entirely.

what his report would be if Remus was found subject to deportation, he estimated that he would recommend this action. He stated that it was the general rule to deport criminals, after conviction, where deportation laws permitted.

Secretary to Decide.

His report will go to the secretary of the department of labor, who will have the final say so in the matter. Tip to date, it is understood, Washington has not taken a hand in the matter, which is being handled through the Atlanta office.

Remus has just been released from the "hole" where he was placed for violation of the prison rule forbidding inmates to smuggle food into the cells. Contraband eggs and steak were found in his possession.

He has been a prison storm center for months. First he issued a statement declaring that former Attorney General Daugherty had never been aware of any liquor deals, and absolutely repudiated his testimony before a senate investigating committee; next he appeared as a government witness at grand jury probes of former warden A. E. Sartain and former assistant Warden L. J. Fletcher, which terminated in their trials and conviction of Sartain and his friend Lawrence R. Hill of Columbus; and only recently he was enjoying all the luxuries a hotel could provide in the Athens jail.

Knowles, of Miami, was made the subject of a vigorous attack by Mayor Walter A. Sims Thursday.

The mayor, in a letter to Collier's explained that the name of Maxwell Knowles does not appear on any city records during the past five years, indicating that if the man ever resided here he was not a taxpayer.

The mayor also quoted correct figures given by the city which show that only 2,200 applications for change of residences from Atlanta to Florida points were received at the postoffice during the past years.

Return to Atlanta.
"Practically all of the people who leave Atlanta to go to Florida, return if they can," the mayor said. "Atlanta is leading the south in bank clearings, postoffice receipts, retail business, and our building records compare favorably with those of other cities. There is just being started one of the largest department stores in the entire south, which will be occupied by Davidson-Paxon-Stokes company and R. H. Macy company, of New York."

"There is just about as much truth in the letter written by Mr. Maxwell Knowles about Atlanta and Georgia as there is in the report of yellow fever in Miami and Florida."

Mr. Knowles, in the letter to Collier's, stated that more than 32,000 Atlantans had changed addresses to Florida; that prominent Atlanta businessmen are moving to Florida; and that there is a widespread business depression here. He signed himself "A Former Georgian."

Atlantic and Pacific Store Employees, 400 Strong, Are Guests at Big Barbecue Held at Lithia Springs

Joyous scenes at the big outing of the 400 employees of the A&P stores of Atlanta, held Wednesday at Lithia Springs, near Austell. The three happy maidens eating the juicy watermelons are, left to right, Miss Mildred Vinson, Atlanta, daughter of B. F. Vinson, vice president of the A&P company; Miss Frances Horner, of Atlanta, and Miss Celestine Williams, of Swainsboro. At the right are some of the contestants in the exciting, but somewhat difficult pastime of whistling while eating crackers, one of the features of the program.

Merry cries and shouts of pleasure shook the suburbs of the old town of Austell Wednesday when more than 400 employees of the Atlantic and Pacific stores of Atlanta enjoyed their annual barbecue dinner and took part in the other entertainment features of the program carried out at Lithia Springs, the well-known Austell resort.

For more than a month plans have been under way for the big outing of the employees of these stores and truck caravans left Atlanta early in the morning carrying their burdens of happy celebrants.

The barbecue dinner began sizzling about 4 o'clock and by the noon hour had reached the proper state of brownness to appeal to the appetites of the employees. After the dinner the A. & P. baseball teams clashed in a hot battle and later a program of potato races, peanut eating and whistling contests, sack races, three-legged races, swimming contests and other events were held.

Late in the afternoon a picnic dinner was followed by a watermelon cutting and early at night the crowds returned to Atlanta in trucks. All the local stores of the A. & P. company were closed for the outing. Committees announced that the picnic was the most enjoyable and successful yet held.

Among the interesting courses on the curriculum will be one in digging into the ancient Phoenician ruins of Ugarit in northern Africa under the direction of Count Byron Kuhn de Prorok, now leading an excavating party in this historic location.

Foreign languages, practical geography, history and international relations will be the principal items on the program of courses offered, but the sciences will be represented and, taking advantage of the freedom of the seas, the professors will teach a little evolution.

Literary fragments from Homer, Herodotus and other classical Greeks have been discovered in a collection of old papyrus manuscripts dating back to the third century, B. C., at Princeton university.

VARIETY OF ROBBERIES REPORTED TO POLICE

A series of robberies reported to detective headquarters showed a varied taste on the part of burglars who operated in this city during the past 24 hours.

Swift & Co., 74 East Alabama street, reported the theft of a wagon and mule.

J. J. Crabb, 74 Rosedale road, reported that a box of automobile tools had been removed from the garage in the rear of his home.

Mrs. L. H. Everett, 200 St. Charles avenue, reported the loss of two large rugs that had been hung out in the yard.

D. E. DeBray, 48 Sells avenue, reported that a negro came to his home a few days ago claiming to have been sent by a cleaning establishment for a suit of clothes. The suit was handed over to him and neither the suit nor the negro has been seen since.

Another clothing haul was reported by the Coleman Dry Cleaning company, 31 Prospect place, which lost three dresses, two suits of clothes and two pairs of trousers.

Questions Expenses.
The auditor declared that in the audit he came across an item for salary and expenses for an auto license inspector, which law did not authorize. He said expenses of this official were $1,250 a year. Mr. State said, in behalf of the highway department, that since the question of advances in salary had come up, the department had in the past 60 or 90 days made considerable collections on these advances and was making strenuous efforts to collect the remainder.

The practice of salary advances, prohibited by the code of Georgia, was noticed in making the audit, he said. He said advances for traveling expenses were permissible, but not in such large sums as had been made by the department, the law, at coming to his notice being one of more than $500 to Chairman Holder.

Mr. State said that in one instance an unsuccessful bidder told him the department had advertised for bids on motor equipment and that after the bids were made, conditions were changed and a higher bidder awarded the contract. He named C. B. Redwine, of Fayetteville, as one of the unsuccessful bidders.

While there are four sources of revenue for the department, Mr. State said—the state of Georgia, the federal government, the counties and sale of war materials—general books had never showed any receipts except from the state. Federal funds were accounted for in a separate book. He ment, and said that he had recommended a continuous audit system of everybody connected with the department.

NEILL URGES REFORM IN STATE TAXATION

Submission to the people of a constitutional amendment providing for the establishment of a classification of property system of taxation is one of the first steps that should be taken in Georgia to bring about tax reform, according to Speaker W. Cecil Neill, of the house of representatives, in a speech delivered at the meeting of the City club Thursday at the Piedmont hotel.

Mr. Neill said the classification system would not interfere with any plans for adoption of an income tax and would prevent the abuses of the present ad valorem system which permits cities and counties to tax at almost unlimited rates while holding the state to a limited number of mills.

Mr. Neill was introduced by Walter McElrath, Atlanta lawyer, who predicted a steady rise in public life for the representative from Muscogee.

Discussing the taxation question further Mr. Neill declared the state should adopt an estate's tax system which would allow the state to collect one-fourth of the money and the federal government three-fourths of the money derived from this source.

WARRANTS NEEDED IN TRAFFIC CASES, M'ELROY CLAIMS

The right of Atlanta policemen to make cases against drivers of automobiles for alleged violation of traffic laws without warrants and the right of the officers to make cases at all on privately-owned property are questioned in a certiorari filed Thursday in Fulton superior court by P. E. McElroy, driver of the Dixie Coach company.

McElroy claims the officer had no right to arrest him because he was not arrested and because the official had no warrant for his arrest. He further claims he was not arrested for violation of any traffic laws, but for a remark made to the arresting officer. McElroy was fined $16 in recorder's court.

Bryan Was Pioneer Fighter For Many Policies of U. S. Though He Lost Presidency

Only Once Did Defeat
Cause Commoner Grief;
Helped Win Prohibition and Woman Suffrage.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, July 30.—Bryan goes to his grave under circumstances appealing to his sense of personal triumph. This would be accounted for by the circumstances of his death if not by other means. That the last functioning of his life should have been in a field so intimately personal to him as religion, that he should have died making a fight for it, that the circumstances of his death enabled him to put before the world a passionate plea for his religion under conditions that gave it the impressiveness of a literal message from the grave—all these things would have been enough to fulfill the picture of triumph.

But aside from that, taking into account only the purely political part of his career, Bryan was not embittered nor even much disappointed. The comments on his end, even those that are in the nature of eulogy which compare him with Henry Clay, do not coincide with Bryan's own feeling about his political career. The points of similarity between Bryan and Clay were many. But Bryan had given up his ambition for the presidency at an earlier age than Clay did. Also Bryan was never greatly cast down by his defeats for the presidency. Most of the narratives of Clay's career picture him as giving more emotion to his defeats for the presidency than to the triumphs he had in some of his fights for policies. With Bryan that was not so. The one occasion when Bryan's really gallant fighting spirit left him for a moment and caused him to give out an expression of woe was not one of his defeats for the presidency but a setback for one of his pet causes. It was when the 1920 democratic convention nominated a candidate whom Bryan regarded as not sufficiently "dry," that Bryan said "my heart is in the grave."

Commoner Was Pioneer.

Bryan had too much vitality, too much humor, too much exuberance of spirit to be greatly cast down by failures in his own ambitions for office. He had a stock attitude about this, a stock illustration and some stock phrases he loved to repeat. Whenever strangers met him who blundered into condolences about his never having been president, Bryan would draw them aside, and, according to the period, draw a picture of Roosevelt advocating the initiative and referendum, or the republicans tumbling over themselves to join in the final triumph of prohibition. He would show that with humorous gloating, and end the picture with a broad grin and an engaging question:

"Madam, why should I bother about losing the office when my opponents are steadily adopting my policies?" A good deal of that sort of thing happened. Bryan was a pioneer in several fields, which others became belated converts and instruments of final success.

Pictures of Roosevelt and of the realising of the plank from Bryan's platform were frequent incidents of Girdiron dinners. Bryan wearing a barrel to hide the nakedness of the nation was one of the most frequent variations of cartoons. The innovations that Bryan advocated when they were innovative and which later became part of our government structure, are decidedly numerous.

Advocated Direct Primary.

During the twenty-five years from 1900 to 1925, twelve important innovations were made in the structure of American government and in the field of judicial decisions. For the moment it is sufficient to enumerate the ones with which Bryan was identified. The first in time was the direct primary. Bryan did not invent that. He was rarely an inventor. But in this as in many other causes he became an instant convert when his attention was called to it. The men who more than any other ones were the originators of the direct primary were two whose names would mean nothing to the present day public.

One a member of the Minnesota legislature in the late nineties, the other a citizen in Oregon. Bryan, through his steady advocacy of the direct primary on the lecture platform and through the personal urging of friends in office, contributed as much as any other one man to the final spread of this innovation. Another change in our governmental procedure to which Bryan had much the same relation was the direct election of United States senators.

A third was the income tax. The first graduated income tax was written by a ways and means committee of congress of which Bryan was a member. When it was invalidated by the supreme court in 1895 Bryan made agitation against that decision one of his steps to power. Thereafter he was a steady advocate of it until it finally came in 1913. Yet another of Bryan's policies was national prohibition. He was late in coming to that. All the pioneer work was done by others. Bryan for years regarded national prohibition as impracticable. As late as 1910 he threw his weight against putting a national prohibition plank into democratic national and state platforms. There could be little doubt, however, that Bryan's help when he took up prohibition on the platform and urged it upon his followers in congress was an indispensable agency to the final victory.

Helped Win Many Fights.

Bryan's advocacy of woman's suffrage was longer. When both prohibition and woman's suffrage came, within practically a year of each other, Bryan had a broad smile of satisfaction in a saying he used to repeat about how much more elevated politics is "since we threw booze out and invited the ladies in." Bryan's contribution to all these causes was by no means limited to his lecturing, powerful as that was. The most vivid memory many people will have of Bryan, friends and opponents alike, will be recollection of the whirlwind way with which he would drop into Washington from a midnight train in an interval between his lecture trips, get half a dozen of his friends in congress to take breakfast with him,

FORD CELEBRATES 62D BIRTHDAY

Detroit, July 30.—(AP)—The 62nd anniversary of his birth and the 22nd year since the first Ford automobile appeared on the market were the occasions today for a quiet celebration at Dearborn, in which only Henry Ford and his immediate family participated. Today Mr. Ford is 62 years old, his step light and elastic, his face tanned and the usual exuberance which has marked his years evident to those few who have gained his presence.

This anniversary day apparently has caused Mr. Ford little concern. Asked if he had plans for a birthday party, he smiled. As to his health, Mr. Ford replied that he "never felt better or healthier."

spend a whole feverish day calling on others, and in 24 or 48 hours bring victory to a fight that before his coming had little promise.

In mentioning the Bryan causes that won anti-imperialism is not included. On that the superficial record is that Bryan lost. He did lose the 1900 presidential campaign in which anti-imperialism was his issue. Apparently McKinley's republican policy of annexation was adopted by America. But it is to be observed that after 1900—after the nation had incorporated the various annexations to which it had been committed as an unanticipated result of the Spanish war—America clearly discarded the policy of expansion.

We completed, many years later in one case, annexations we had already tentatively begun in 1900 like the Panama Canal zone and the Virgin islands; but after 1900 America never initiated another step. When the great war ended and when the other nations tried to thrust dependencies on us in the shape of mandates, there was nothing more clear about America's state of mind than our conviction that we wanted no more, that we preferred to withdraw rather than expand.

JAPANESE CABINET QUITS AFTER SPLIT OVER TAX POLICY

Tokyo, July 31.—(AP)—The cabinet has resigned.

The resignation followed a serious split between the Kenseikai and Seiyukai parties, both supporting the government of Premier Kato, over tax adjustment proposals.

The premier asked for the resignations of three Seiyukai members of the cabinet, but the Seiyukai party decided that this request should not be granted. This necessitated the resignation of the whole cabinet.

were put in the same cages, and many fights were the result.

Plate glass windows on a number of adjoining stores were cracked by the heat from the flames. An awning on the J. P. Allen department store caught from flying sparks, but was quickly extinguished before any damage was done.

During 1925, Dr. Ruth T. Rodgers, of Oakland, Calif., examined the eyes of 2,400 California school children.

CHINESE ARE REPORTED MARCHING UPON TIBET

London, July 30.—Ten thousand Chinese soldiers are marching on Tibet by way of the Kham province in eastern Tibet, according to an unconfirmed dispatch from Calcutta. It is believed that the Chinese contemplate attacking Lhasa, the sacred town of the Tibetans and home of the Dalai Lama.

Tibet is nominally a section of China and is so recognized by the powers in treaties, but since 1908 the anti-Chinese feeling has been so strong that the Pekin government has failed to exercise its sovereignty.

Since the Chinese troops left Tibet a constant political war has been waged between the Dalai Lama, temporal ruler of Tibet, and the Panchen Lama, the highest spiritual authority. Declaring there was a plot against his life, the Panchen Lama fled from his residence at the Tashi Lhunpo monastery last winter, traveled to Pekin, where he was highly honored.

No secret was made of the fact that he asked Pekin to organize an expeditionary force and to force Tibet to return to the Chinese fold. The Panchen Lama at that time said about half the Tibetans favored a return to China's rule.

Alabama Schools Face Court Test On Bible Reading

Montgomery, Ala., July 30.—A case to test the legality of Alabama's state law requiring daily Bible reading in public schools looms with the announcement by State Superintendent John A. Abercrombie that teachers refusing to obey the law must forfeit their jobs.

"Public school teachers will forfeit their pay if they fail to read the Bible in their classes as provided by law," Abercrombie declared. "Continued violation of this law will result in dismissal."

Abercrombie indicated that the case against Miss Sallie Caldwell, at present a county teacher and who served in 1920 as principal of the Scottsboro, Jackson county, school would be pushed.

Miss Caldwell had admitted recently in a monthly questionnaire that she did not read the Bible to her pupils when "other more important things" were at hand. If she protests a great legal clash testing the law is expected to result.

An ordinance passed by the Alabama legislature in 1924 provided that "all schools supported in whole or in part by public funds shall have once every school day readings from the Holy Bible," and that "teachers in making monthly reports shall show on the same that they have complied with the law in this respect."

Miss Caldwell is at present in New York on a visit and whether she will fight the case is not known.

PERFECT SAFETY.—Fear thou not, for I am with thee; I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. Isa. 41:10.

PRAYER.—Lord, Thou hast been our dwelling-place in all generations, and in Thee we are safe. May this knowledge perfect our faith.

In agriculture is permanent and sound and it is Georgia's fortune to at last become the center of great progress in this respect.

While south Georgia is preparing to ride on the crest, and central and north Georgia also have their distinctive advantages, they will ride along with south Georgia—and all of Georgia is on the threshold of a new day.

SAFETY COUNCIL DINNER.

The Atlanta Safety Council will honor the president of the senate and the speaker of the house at an informal dinner at the Henry Grady hotel at 7:30 o'clock. They are both good presiding officers, and take deep interest in human welfare.

The dinner will have no legislative or political significance, the one thought—"safety"—being the keynote of the discussion, and citizen responsibility and cooperation being the impressive feature.

Among prominent guests will be the governor, attorney general, supreme and appellate court justices, senators and congressmen, the mayor and other city officials, civic leaders of Atlanta, highway officials, newspaper men, and others.

Every citizen in Atlanta ought to cooperate in this great organized effort for human safety on the streets and highways and in the schools, factories and homes—everywhere.

Except for guests of honor the dinner is necessarily on the "Dutch basis"—$1.50 a plate—and it is hoped, in the interest of one of the greatest movements ever inaugurated in the interest of welfare a large number of citizens will attend—all of whom are invited.

Reservations should be promptly made this morning and a phone message to the office of the Atlanta Safety Council will arrange this detail.

The Georgia Railway and Power company quartet will have charge of the entertainment features.

MOVIES MOVED UP.

Of recent days the public has been apprised of the fact that there has been agitation in Atlanta which is termed a greater movie season, sponsored by Will H. Hays, chief of the motion picture distributors and producers of America.

As we understand it, about 18 cities have been selected to initiate this new idea of opening the motion picture season in August rather than in September, and Atlanta—as is due her because of her importance as a distributing and exhibiting center—is numbered among these cities.

The coming season marks the 29th year in the motion picture industry, and for 29 years the movies have followed the lead of their older cousin, the speaking stage, in opening the new season in September. Although closely akin, the two great amusement elements have nothing quite in common other than to visualize stories, the one by way of action and in great spaces and the other by words and phrases and limited to a stage. The very nature of things made it necessary to begin the speaking stage new season in September, but not so with the cinema entertainment.

With wonderful places in which to show their wares, with pictures ready for the market in early August, with cooling apparatuses of the most modern character in the motion picture theaters, with prices of admission within the reach of every class of patron, the motion picture season of new products can just as well begin in August as in September. Hence the new move, in which all theaters in Atlanta are joining hands.

That Atlanta was selected as one of the cities to start the 1925-1926 season in August is a deserved tribute to the importance of the city as a motion picture center. That she takes her place in the ranks of New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Denver and other much larger cities is a tribute—a rightful tribute—to her importance as an exhibiting and distributing center and to the discriminating taste of the local movie patrons.

While we have not any definite figures at hand, we do know that this city boasts a "film row," the business of which amounts to many hundreds of thousands of dollars a year, where the very latest and best motion pictures are distributed over the southeast to thousands of theaters daily; where several hundred high-class citizens earn their daily wage; where leases are made for long periods and at good rentals.

And any one who is observant can but note that the theaters built here are of the very highest type and occupy the most valuable spots in the city's downtown section.

As one of the most important and most valuable of our industries, we are glad to cooperate in their efforts to cater to the public by making August a more delightful month in Atlanta.

And the promise is for great pictures in greater movie season, beginning next Monday.

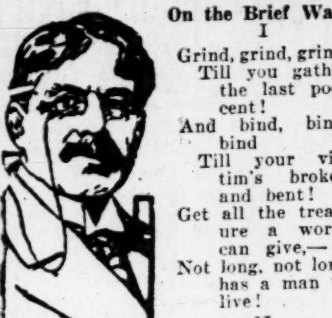

Indiana is making wholesale arrests of speeders "when they stop to let their engines cool."

It's great to be able to pay taxes, and not kick out shoe leather about it.

Tis a fool that faces the Evening
gray.
Singing a love song all the way.

III

Goodnight, and life's goodbye.
For dark it grows and late;
And leave behind you no soul to sigh.
And take no gold to the Gate—
The gold that was all life had to give.

Not long, not long has a man to live!

Blame the Boh-Hair Girls.

What happened to the victim who probably waited too long on the boobied-hair customers is told by The Atlanta News in the local item. The victim was suddenly hit by a very great pain, for all the eaters—when they had time—read things they had written themselves, and everybody applauded everything else. The "dinner," however, was very good indeed.

Them Literary Dinners.

"We used to call them literary suppers," said the Adams. "Enter prize," said all that is changed. Though given at 9 o'clock at night, they are styled "literary dinners," and the literature we read there gave us a very great pain, for all the eaters—when they had time—read things they had written themselves, and everybody applauded everything else. The "dinner," however, was very good indeed.

At the End of the Road.

The journey is ended—so, rest you the road.

At the end of the road, friend,—the road.

Though long seemed the way
In God's dark and His day,
"Rest now, where the road ends!"
The sweet voices say.

The journey is ended; No thorns at the breast.

At the end of the road, where the Silence sings, "Rest!"

No black skies that seem
Still with lightning's gleam!
At the end of the road, rest brings these thy dreams!

Thank God it is ended—the journey no longer!

The sign of the sorrow—the grief of the song!

All grief now in flight
Fadeth far from thy sight.
God's rest to the weary and God's peace, and goodnight!

The Pleasant Hill Times finds something to be thankful for in the last year.

A low-flying airplane caused a runaway accident near a Missouri town recently and it is announced that the pilot will need to make some sky-traffic rules.

THE LESSON OF THE STARS.

Before retiring for the night, whenever the weather permits, I walk out onto the upper porch of my home that leads from the room in which I read and write and take a look at the stars.

And I see the very same stars that you may see any night when the sky is clear. This truth in itself is very wonderful.

But what impresses me more is the fact that the same friendly stars are to be seen year in and year out. And they always have their same happy sparkle and twinkle.

A week of storms and rains may have screened them from view, but just the minute that a clear night appears there you will see your friends again in their nests in the sky, as though nothing at all had happened.

And the great lesson is this: The stars never change, though storms and stress, earthquakes and disasters may have come about during an interlude.

I have some friends who always seem the same, no matter what trouble they have been called upon to experience. If anything they shine brighter and more gloriously to me after their spell of sadness or sorrow.

I have favorites among the stars. And I have favorite spots in the heavens, brighter and more glorious to me than any other place in the sky.

We appear very insignificant to the stars as they look down upon us, I fancy. They smile at our little frets and pains.

But they have a right to think of us in this way when we are reminded that many of these seemingly tiny stars are much larger than this big world in which we live.

At least one lesson of the stars is to make us lose our pride and aspire to become something bigger and better every day.

The Atlanta Association Indorses the Title Bill

Editor Constitution: Accept a word of thanks and commendation for the excellent editorial you ran in Monday's issue of The Constitution, commending the substitute bill covering the automobile title law. This substitute bill really was the result of strenuous and unwavering effort on the part of our association in an effort to dispose of the conflict that arose between the Guess bill and the Hatch bill. We will appreciate any further support that you can give this substitute bill, which has not only the backing of our association, insurance men, and Secretary of State McLeoden, but which will also be supported by everyone originally lined up with the Guess bill and the Hatch bill. #### LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

New York, July 30.—The saddest building in all New York.

At the corner of Twenty-ninth street and First avenue it stands, a great pile of brick surrounded by a high iron fence. Across the street the children of the tenements sing and play, and the life of the city whirls past unmindful of the tragedies of life that are ending inside.

To the city morgue come the remains of the unidentified dead of Manhattan and their number is legion. They are wrapped in sheets, photographed, neatly tagged and entered in the book of unidentified dead. Then the bodies are taken down to the dark, cool of the basement where they are placed in long cases and left to sleep with others of their kind.

Here come the suicides, the derelicts and failures, wrecked and tossed aside by the city's onward rush. Here are uncaught criminals, who were safe from the arm of the law but could not escape the longer reach of vengeance. Their fellows of the underworld know who they are, but they know even better how to keep the secret.

Not all are in these two classes. There are strangers from other cities who met their death suddenly and alone. They dropped out of existence in accidents without causing more than a momentary ripple on New York's surface. Folks back home are wondering and waiting.

Year by year the photos stack up and the entries in the book increase. Tragedy scores a triumph, however, when relatives of lost men and women come to look for them. They sit on a long bench in the office, their faces torn with emotion. They fear to find their loved ones dead, but they hope the search is over. Some go downstairs and return sobbing. For them the quest is finished. Others return and shake their heads, to continue the hunt.

This is the port of missing men.

"Lee and Jake" Shubert, the producers, have a soft and sentimental pair of hearts. While others find new faces each season, the Shuberts give new contracts to chorus girls in reward for their ambition, loyalty and good behavior, no matter if their

William Burns, the great detective, had to call in a bell boy at the hotel one morning last week to find his collar button.

The high mark for telephone calls coming in at the various exchanges is between five and six in the afternoon when husbands tell wives they can't get home for dinner. The next busiest hour falls shortly after 12 midnight. Special night rates for out-of-town calls give every commercial traveler on the line, every tourist and every lone woman and girl who think back to the ancestral home.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Gabriele d'Annunzio.

The poet-visionary of Italy, recently visited by Mussolini, announces that he is about to return to the world of the living.

The last year. The solitude was not explained by his message that he completed five novels during the time he was shut up in his villa. In his new books d'Annunzio's theme is as ever: tempestuous flaming love.

"Love that does not grow cold, but that is vigorous, one of the highest, says the writer himself. The consummation of love in the new books probably is something like a violent storm, kings, princes, popes and cardinals in the capital of the church-empire. His whole career, the flame affair, his aviation exploits, his submarine adventures are jumping into the fire of his love.

On several occasions he has spoken of his contempt for politics, and on more than one occasion he has threatened to give up public life and devote himself to science and research. His friends derided him away. Lord Balfour seems to be that fun, preposterous, unreal and incredible that the wildest scenes drawn from his creative imagination in his books. This ugly little devil, this youth who was snuffed out by the fire of his love, was snuffed out by the fire of his love.

COMMONER SEEN AS MORAL GIANT

Chicago, July 30.—(P)—William Jennings Bryan was morally the greatest man of his day or age, former Governor Edward F. Dunne, of Illinois, declared last night in a radio address eulogizing the commoner.

"He had none of the vices or weaknesses so common among the intellectually great," Mr. Dunne said. "He never stooped to hypocrisy or deception. He never dodged. He never utilized sordid means to attain ends. He had great ambitions, but never by word or deed did he seek to consummate these ambitions by ignominious or unscrupulous means. He attracted millions to every cause he advocated, but not one of them by seductive promises of personal gain. He explained his motives, and he did not believe in, his soul was just and righteous, and those causes he fought for with all the tenacity of Peter the Hermit. He was indomitable and impervious to discouragement in any crusade he entered upon. He was magnificent in defeat. He often declared that truth may lose a battle or many battles, but she wins her wars."

"He lived an ideal life and died an ideal death. His last fight was to win the greatest of his country the right to protect, as he sincerely believed, the children of the nation from infidelity and disbelief in the Christian Bible. He gave up his life as the result of that fight for his idea of the Christian religion as Emmett died upon the scaffold, and Leonidas at Thermopylae, for their countries."

"The American nation has lost a great patriot; the world a great figure; the Christian religion a great champion, and I have lost a great friend."

UNUSUAL SIGNS OF PROGRESS SEEN

the hog industry in south Georgia successful, is being produced in a yield which is three times greater than any year heretofore.

Cotton, the time-honored staple, is in better condition this year than at any time since the coming of the boll weevil and the yield per acre will be almost equal to the old days when it was the sole crop. And due to short-crop in other parts of the cotton belt, the price will be one which will net the farmers of this part of Georgia a substantial profit, a situation which obtains for the first time in many years.

Melons which have failed financially as a crop for four years this year have netted greater profits to the producers than at any time in a decade. The prices have been good and the yield marvelous. The vines produced for such a long period that farmers continued to ship profitably long after they thought their yield would have been exhausted. The vines are so prolific that in many cases they extend from the farm out into the roads where the melons are crushed by passing automobiles or eaten by passing pedestrians.

All Crops Good.

Other crops carry with them the same story. It is a case where the farmers tried all kinds of crops for years and then won success in all of the same year. Agriculture being the backbone of progress in this section it is easy to tell the story by saying that the farmers have anywhere from five to 50 times as much money as they have in normal years.

In Thomas county the people are aroused to a high pitch of enthusiasm over the prospects and this situation exists to a more or less degree in 60 per cent of the counties in the southern tier of the state.

Horace McDowell, manager of the Swift packing plant at Moultrie, told of the effect the increased corn production would have.

"With three times as much corn we can raise three times as many hogs," he said. "All through this belt the corn crop is the best we have ever raised. Because of freight rates and for other reasons this corn will remain here in Georgia and be used for raising hogs and cattle. This means more expansion in the ever-expanding hog and cattle industry, which means that more money will be brought here from this source than if the corn itself had been shipped away to northern markets."

The general influx of farmers from other states who are attracted here by the great tobacco prospects is not confined to this particular locality. At Alma, 50 farmers from Alabama, N. C., attended the opening of the tobacco market. Ben Hill county received 100 new farmers from other states. Automobiles bearing North Carolina and Virginia tags are seen on all the highways. Moultrie and Colquitt county report hundreds of settlers from other states. Reports from Albany, Americus, Quitman, Blackshear, Douglas, Fitzgerald, Tifton, Waycross are equally definite as to the large number of new farmers who have come to Georgia to locate on tobacco lands.

At Alma, A. C. Walker, county demonstration agent of Bacon, and J. A. Haggard, former North Carolina tobacco grower, are bringing in new families to settle on the excellent tobacco lands in that county. Mr. Haggard himself has brought more than 100 families to Georgia and said he would double this number this year.

A. E. & A. Road.

Officials of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad are cooperating in the general development of the tobacco industry. They were pioneers in tobacco development and three of them, A. D. Daniel, passenger traffic agent; J. A. W. Tucker, general agent; and W. R. Tucker, general agricultural agent, are devoting virtually their entire time to this work. They are assisted by Colonel B. L. Rugg, receiver; J. J. Edwards, assistant to the receiver; C. B. Kealhofer, freight traffic manager; H. S. Young, industrial agent; L. C. Collier, agricultural agent; J. S. Crocker, commercial agent at Thomaston and all division and local freight and passenger traffic agents.

Much of the territory best adapted to the culture of tobacco is located in the line of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic and that railroad has been instrumental in getting many south Georgia cities designated as tobacco markets and also has cooperated in building tobacco warehouses.

AMERICUS MAY BUILD TOBACCO HOUSE.

Americus, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—Leslie, although out of the present tobacco raising season of the state, will harvest 50,000 pounds of bright leaf from the 100 acres planted this year which, when marketed, will bring around $25,000, providing the market remains steady for the next week. In spite of unfavorable weather conditions, the growers have produced a yield per acre equal to other sections of the state and indications are that next year will find from 300 to 500 acres of land cultivated to tobacco in the vicinity of Leslie.

It is likely that a warehouse will be erected at Americus within the next two or three years if the Leslie grow-

SALES CONTINUE AT MOULTRIE.

Waycross, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—Tobacco sales Thursday at the Waycross warehouse totaled 11,972 pounds, the highest paid was 35 cents. The daily $10 prize was won by E. D. Crosby.

BAINBRIDGE GROWERS ARE SATISFIED.

Bainbridge, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—Local warehouse sold approximately 15,000 pounds of bright leaf tobacco today, with an average price of 18 cents. Better grades of tobacco will be offered next week when the first primings are ready.

Robert L. Foreman, chairman of the luncheon committee, who presided, explained that the citizens' charter committee is in no way criticizing the personnel of the present government, but is attacking the form of government. The present charter, he said, was put into effect 50 years ago.

In addition to Mr. Wood and Mr. Russell, officials present included Representative Frank Hooper, Jr., of Fulton; Representative Paul L. Lindsay, of DeKalb; John T. Hancock, president of the Atlanta board of education; Alderman P. L. McShay and Councilman C. C. Aven, T. L. Slapney and W. M. Etheridge.

Tobacco Grades Improve And Prices Are Higher

Macon, Ga., July 30.—Heavier offerings of tobacco were made on nearly all markets in southern Georgia today, and the prices in most instances were higher than on the previous day, due to the fact that the grades were better. With a number of markets still not heard from, considerable more than $100,000 in cash had been paid over to the growers on the day's sales. Sales for the three days amount to 2,564,729 pounds, which sold for $539,854.02. The record of today's sales:

TWO AMENDMENTS RECEIVE APPROVAL

Voicing unanimous approval of two proposed amendments to the constitution to remove obstacles in the way of reformation of the fiscal system of the state, the house committee on amendments to the constitution Thursday night referred the bills to a subcommittee, with instructions to make minor changes for the perfecting of the measures.

The constitutional changes proposed remove restrictions on the amount of clerical help allowed the state treasurer's office and the office of the comptroller-general. It had previously been explained by State Auditor Sam J. Slate that desired reforms, which would cause all money collected under state authority to be paid into the state treasury, and paid out only on warrants backed by proper appropriations of the assembly, were impossible until the constitution was changed to allow sufficient clerical help in the treasurer's and the comptroller-general's office.

Salaries Are Limited.

The state constitution now limits the amount spent on clerical help in the treasury to $5,000 and in the comptroller-general's office to $4,000. Practically half of the state's revenue is now collected by other departments, it was stated, and a system of imposing special taxes, with a special department created to collect and disburse the money, has grown up. Auditor Slate told the committee there are now 72 different departments in the state government.

The charges to be made by the subcommittee are in the wording of the clauses which are to be placed on the ballots when the questions are referred to the people for ratification. It was pointed out that a mere technical change in the constitution would mean nothing to 99 out of 100 voters. The bill is also amended to make it mandatory on the next legislature, after the ratification is voted by the people, to undertake fiscal reform for Georgia.

Representative Barrett, of Stephens, was applauded when he stated that "as long as the present state auditor, Mr. Slate, remains in his office, there won't be much going wrong with Georgia's money affairs."

Elect County Officers Biennially.

A bill to change the constitution to require election of county officers every two, instead of four years, as at present, was favorably reported. An adverse report was given to a bill introduced by Representative Lindsay and Weeks of DeKalb to allow counties to increase their rate of taxation for school purposes, while a bill to make widows of Confederate veterans, who were married before 1898 eligible for pensions, by Representative Kent of Wheeler, was also defeated.

Another bill by Representative Kent to change the county line between his county and Laurens county was set as a special business for the next meeting of the committee.

The committee then took up the bill introduced by the Athens delegation, to issue $100,000 in state bonds for building for port terminal facilities. There was considerable debate as to whether the committee should act on the bill immediately, or defer action until the authors could be present, the sentiment of the committee being overwhelmingly in opposition to the bill.

In the midst of the debate on this point, a motion to adjourn was put and, on a tie vote, Representative Fletcher of Monroe county, in the chair, voted for adjournment.

GOLDIN TO SERVE TERM IN PRISON

would study to be either a doctor or a lawyer. It was indicated by the boy's attorneys that there would be no appeal from the verdict.

Goldin's mother was not in the courtroom when the verdict was read, but came in immediately afterward and embraced her son.

Goldin was charged with shooting his father, Ollie Goldin, to death about a month ago, it being claimed that the boy crept up to a window, and placing a gun on the sill, fired the full load into his father's head, killing him instantly, as he lay asleep on a cot, following a noon meal.

The trial began Wednesday morning, the defense resting after a statement to the jury by the boy, in which he said he killed his father because of the continued abuse heaped upon him and other members of his family by his father.

The case was tried in Harbison county superior court before Judge P. A. Irvin, with Ed Griffith, solicitor general, assisted by W. H. Cheney, of Bremen. Goldin was represented by W. W. Monday, of Cedarstown, and J. J. Head, of Tallapoosa.

GRANT PARK PASTOR LAUDS CONGREGATION

Marked cooperation of members and officials with the pastor of the Grant Park Baptist church was highly commended in a statement made Thursday by the Rev. A. W. Reeves. Mr. Reeves stated that the unusual interest and willingness on the part of the members to aid in making it a larger and better church also had served to increase its spiritual growth. Seven new members were added last Sunday. The Wednesday night Bible lectures during the month of July have been well attended, he said.

IN MEMORIAM WILL RACE NO MORE

Cincinnati, July 30.—(P)—In Memoriam, son of McGee, which in 1923 defeated Zev and My Owa in the Lottion championship, will race no more. Following the announcement that Zev, the colt that defeated him in the memorable match race at Louisville, would be retired to the stud, Carl Wiedemann, owner of the McGee colt, stated today that In Memoriam also would be sent to his farm in Kentucky.

In Memoriam was unable to stand training this year because of leg ailment, who some trouble prevented him appearing under colors in 1924. During his career the racer won purses totaling $91,532.

DIEGEL LEADS IN CANADA OPEN PLAY

Toronto, July 30.—(P)—Leo Diegel, winner of the Canadian open golf championship at Montreal last year, led a field of 14 American and Canadian stars to defend his title today at Lambton in the first eighteen hole round of the annual 72-hole tournament. Posting a card of 69, two under par, he attained a lead of two strokes over Andy Kay, of Lambton, and Walter Hagen, of Pasadena, Fla., former British open champion.

All three leaders played par or better on fourteen of the holes, each taking an extra stroke on four holes. Diegel owed his lead to the fact that he had six birdies to four for each of the others. His score equaled Kay's competitive record for the course.

There were a number of withdrawals, the most prominent being Tommy Armour, who tied with Edgar and Charlie Murray for the title at Ottawa in 1920, and Johnny Farrell, who is a favorite with Canadian galleries.

Score of the Leaders:

Leo Diegel, Glen Oaks, 32-37-69.

A. Kay Lambton, Toronto, 33-38-71.

Walter Hagen, Pasadena, Fla., 34-37-71.

M. J. Brady, Mamaronck, N. Y., 36-38-72.

Willie MacFarlane, Oak Ridge, 34-40-74.

Cyril Walker, Englewood, 36-38-74.

Jon Kirkwood, Pasadena, Fla., 39-36-75.

FAMOUS RACER FOUND DEAD

Toledo, Ohio, July 30.—(P)—George H. Ketcham, 63, wealthy Toledo business man and sportsman who won international recognition in harness racing in 25 years by bringing out Crescent, then the fastest trotting horse in the world, was found dead in his apartment here today. Coroner Heister pronounced death due to apoplexy.

Although his outstanding racing triumph was in driving Crescent the mile in 2:02 3/4 a quarter century ago, the fastest time made by a trotting horse up to the time, he owned many trotters that won fame by proving themselves among the fastest race horses in their day. He was formerly commander of the Ohio Yacht club and later of the Interlake Yacht association.

VERA SOUGHT FOR ROME BOUT

Rome, Ga., July 30.—(Special.)—Billie Lotz, Atlanta sportsman and manager of Larry Avera, has agreed to let Avera meet Tom Wilson, of Knoxville, in a Rome ring for the Southern welterweight title. If these two men can be brought together the fight will be staged in Rome on Friday, August 7, and contracts have been mailed both fighters for that date.

Up to Thursday no returned contracts had been received. Mr. Lotz says Wilson outweights Avera but that he will fight if the Knoxville man agrees to train down to the welter limit. Wilson's manager has been communicated with on this new angle to the proposed match and J. H. Lam, promoter, is awaiting his answer.

Mr. Lotz stated that the match would have been all right with Avera, but as long as he was under his management he would see that he wasn't matched with a boy 35 pounds heavier.

SARAAGO RACES TO START TODAY

E. Phillips Oppenheim

Pauline indulged in a rare hesitation. It was several moments before he arrived at a decision. Then he resumed his seat.

"You can show Mr. Roden in," he directed.

Roden entered, silent and unobtrusive as ever, laid his dark Homburg hat on the table, slipped into a chair in response to Pauline's gestured invitation, and, allegorically speaking, staked out his ground for the duel to come.

"Very kind of you to see me, Sir Lawrence," he began. "I was afraid, after our last interview, access to you might have been a little more difficult."

"When was our last meeting?" Pauline demanded.

Roden hesitated.

"Well, well," he acknowledged, "I can't say that it was exactly a meeting, was it? I watched you kill some high pheasants the first day and some fast partridges the next."

"And afterwards?"

"Afterwards I made one of those mistakes to which you must now have become accustomed," Roden confessed. "I followed your car towards London and let you get out of sight. Still, a great question is opened up by the mere fact that you took so much trouble to avoid me. Why was that, Sir Lawrence?"

"I don't like you," was the cool rejoinder. "Surely that is sufficient reason."

"Not quite sufficient for leaving your car by a subterfuge and motor-ing off in a different direction. I made one bad mistake, I admit, in following your empty car. You surely made another when you told the man at the roadside garage your exact destination."

Pauline smiled.

"I told him because there was no secret about it," he replied.

"No secret about it?" Roden ex-claimed. "Then why did you not drive direct to Norwich?"

"You are an inquisitive person," Pauline remarked. "However, since it seems to interest you, here is the truth. I left my car at Mildenhall and returned to Norwich, as I realized that it was impossible for me to get to town, at the hour I desired, by car. I doubled back to Norwich and tried to catch the 12:30 train."

"You missed it, I think."

"If I did, what business is that of yours? I missed it by five minutes only."

"It still seems curious to me," Roden persisted, after a brief pause, "that you should have been willing to admit that I am not accountable to you for my movements."

"You are not accountable to me," Roden acknowledged softly. "But, however doubtful my position may be, I still represent the law. I represent also Lady Judith Honerton."

"I see. You are the private detective Lady Judith Honerton speaks of."

"I was not aware that her lordship knew of my existence. It was Lady Judith who engaged me and it is Lady Judith with whom I have been investigating."

"With success, I trust."

"With this much success, at any rate," Roden declared, with a sudden access of vigor in his tone, "we have discovered that your movements on the day following Mr. Samuel Fernham's disappearance need a certain amount of explanation."

"If ever the time should arrive and a properly qualified person should be the inquirer, Pauline assured him, 'that explanation would be readily forthcoming.'"

The detective sighed.

"I was afraid you might take it like that," he confessed. "We eventually are placing the card before the horse. Still, her ladyship showed a great deal of common sense. It was her suggestion that I should spend a lot of further time upon the matter. I should endeavor to discover from you personally whether you had not some special reason for behaving in so unaccountable a manner."

"Her ladyship is very kind," Pauline observed, with faint sarcasm. "You can go back and tell her I find your joint interest in my movements flatter-ing but absurd. If you wish to earn that twenty thousand pounds, Mr. Roden, you can use your time to better purpose than in dogging the footsteps of a person of my tastes and harmless."

You cannot seriously suppose that I am concerned in the disappearance of either of these two young men. Why, then, do you waste your time taking note of my movements?"

The detective deliberated for some moments before he replied.

"The problem of the disappearance of these two young men, Sir Lawrence," he explained, "is one which we are unfortunately obliged to tackle—in the way of surmise, I mean—without the guiding light of motive. We admit the sheer absurdity, on the surface, of your being connected with the affair in the slightest degree. Having admitted that, I must confess that but for Lady Judith's intervention I should have given up the case in Norwich for the next few weeks to try to discover the reason for your hurried visit there."

"It seems rather a pity that Lady Judith interfered," Pauline remarked. "Norwich is an interesting old city, and you would doubtless have made some pleasant acquaintances. I should recommend the Maid's Head hotel. I lunched there after missing my train."

Roden blinked several times. His eyes seemed slower than usual. He was working himself up now to a genuine effort at candor.

"Sir Lawrence Pauline," he began at last. "I am as tired as you must be of these indecisive visits, these conversations in which we fence like third-rate diplomats in Baywater written novels. This is my last visit to you unless I come with a warrant in my hand. My final words to you shall be at any rate frank ones. I am defeated and humiliated in my attempts to discover the fate either of Ernest or of Samuel Fernham, but whether your knowledge be a guilty one or not, I believe that you have some knowledge which would help toward the solution of this mystery, and I appeal to you for the last time to assist the law and probably save the life of Lady Honerton."

"My reply to you," Pauline rejoined coldly, "shall be equally frank. Except for that marvelous creation of Dickens, Mr. Buckle, from whose methods I presume you gleaned the idea of doubling back on your tracks, I think you are without exception the most flamboyant and hopeless of all the detectives I ever met or heard of in real life or fiction."

Mr. Roden rose to his feet and brushed his dark Homburg hat with his sleeve. His attitude was meek. He had not even the air of one who has received a rebuke.

Pauline was surprised when, at a few minutes past eight, he presented himself at Park Lane, to find his host partaking of his second cocktail in the winter garden, wearing a dinner jacket and black tie.

"Is the dance postponed?" he asked.

Joseph made cryptic signs to Martin, which resulted in the production of a fresh tray of cocktails.

"No, it isn't that," he explained, a little nervously, "but to tell you the truth I'm not much of a man at these starchy functions—you know what I mean, Pauline, all formality and stills. I—er—thought that as you were going, I might cry off, what?"

Pauline shook his head.

"My dear Lord Honerton," he protested, "I am afraid you scarcely realize that this is an exceptional function, and that the marquis, and the marchioness especially, are people of old-fashioned ideas. It would be entirely out of order for me to escort Lady Judith."

Pauline turned his head at the sound of light footsteps. Judith, in a gown of pale sea green gauze, which floated around her almost like the foam from an unfurling wave, came slowly across the room. Both men were for a moment speechless. She paused and dropped then a little curtsy. Her eyes sought Pauline's as though for his approval.

"A success, I hope?" she queried. "Glad brought it over himself by airplane from Paris this afternoon. Why did you look as though he had had bad news?"

"Your father had a scheme for avoiding the dance tonight," Pauline observed. "He thought that mine would be sufficient escort. I have had to point out to him that this is an exceptional occasion—that my escort could not possibly be in order."

"It is really wonderful how, with all your more serious activities, you pick up such a stock of miscellaneous knowledge," she declared satirically. "Sir Lawrence is quite right, dad, but as it happens, my champagne is amply provided for. Joyce has just telephoned to say that she and her mother will call for me at 10 o'clock."

Martin announced dinner. Judith at once laid her fingers on Pauline's arm.

"Martin," she directed, "please see to the champagne yourself this evening. I want the best in the world and plenty of it. And, dad, let's be as quick as we can over dinner. I want particularly to talk to Sir Lawrence afterwards before we start."

Joseph, freed from his responsibilities of the evening, was almost light-headed.

"The quicker the better, my dear," he assented. "They begin bridge early at the club."

Judith left the dinner table long before the conclusion of the meal, and Pauline had scarcely lit his first cigarette when Martin entered the room and approached him.

"Her ladyship would be obliged if you would come to her boudoir, sir," he announced. "Coffee will be served there."

Pauline laid down his cigarette and followed Martin from the room. They mounted the famous marble staircase, traversed a wide corridor, and finally, after a discreet knock, he was ushered into an apartment of which in those first few minutes he received a confused impression of smoke colored draperies, flashes of unexpected blue, and the odor of burning wood. Judith was half seated, half reclining upon a great divan near the fire. She motioned him to sit by her side, and poured him out some coffee.

"Thank you for coming so soon," she said a little abruptly. "There are cigars on the table there. Cigars you don't smoke, I know. Don't neglect your coffee. It's really Turkish—orange flower and all. I'm glad you came early," she added with a glance at the clock, "we have an hour and five minutes. I want to talk to you."

Pauline murmured a word or two of polite acquiescence, helped himself to the coffee, and lit a cigarette. The atmosphere of the room pleased him, chiefly because of the absence of that exotic note which would have made it more commonplace. The walls were almost severe, paneled in white satinwood with faint gilt edgings and a thin inlay of blue damask. The furniture was French, but the upholstery was luxurious. The thick carpet was velvety and smoke colored. There were many flowers in wonderful bowls, but they were all roses and carnations; none of the hot-house variety. The only dominant colors in the room were a smoky gray, a delicious soft blue, and gilt. The cigarettes were of fine tobacco but unscented, the odor of the burning wood faintly aromatic.

"You say you want to talk to me," he observed. "I know what about. Your name Sherlock Holmes came to me this afternoon."

"Do you ever make a mistake in life?" she asked.

"Infrequently," he admitted.

"Well, you have made one now," she declared. "I have not a single word to say to you on that subject."

"I confess myself surprised," he murmured.

She laughed softly and removed the cigarette from between her white teeth. It was a pleasant sound, even if its note of humor was scanty—a sort of long croon, with a twang of provocation. Little lines showed for a moment at the corners of her eyes.

"I want to talk about myself," she confessed.

"To me?"

"Why not? Aren't you interested?"

There was a note almost of anxiety under the faint smile of her lips; she was looking straight into his eyes. She had reckoned herself always something of a diviner of men's thoughts and emotions. Pauline had baffled her more than once, but after all he was a human being like the others. There must be a way through the armor of his imperturbability. Her moment must come.

"Every one," he said, "is interested in Lady Judith Fernham."

Her retort was true enough, yet somehow or other it brought her a certain measure of satisfaction. She told herself that if she had not penetrated she had grazed the surface of his defenses.

An impressive ceremony was performed in the presence of an assemblage of friends and relatives.

Throughout the home an artistic arrangement of palms and rich foliage were used as a background for baskets of asters, gladioli and bud-deia in shades of orchid.

Miss Irene Landry sang "O Promise Me," accompanied by Mendel Segal at the piano and Will Chase, violinist.

Miss Inez Haygood was lovely in creole chiffon over deep yellow silk. Miss Doris Haygood was gowned in lace of the palest shade of flesh bleeding into deep pink. The two bridesmaids carried Columbia roses.

Miss Dorothy Templeman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Templeman, was the little flower girl. Her dress was flesh georgette caught at each side with French hand-made roses. She carried a basket of rose petals.

Little Miss Betty Haygood, niece of the bride, was ringbearer. Her lovely frock was of ruffled organdy of crimson.

The bride's gown was fashioned of chiffon and lace. Her filmy veil was held in place with hands of lace and orange blossoms. She carried a real lace handkerchief and her only ornament was a platinum pin, gift of the groom. Her bouquet was of white rosebuds and valley lilies showered with roses.

Following the ceremony there was a reception. Receiving with the bride and groom were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Boling, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Haygood, R. E. Drennon and Dr. W. T. Airheart.

Punch was served from bowls embedded in flowers on tables placed on either side of the porch by Miss Betty Harrell and Miss Viola Phillips.

Miss Stella Mace kept the bride's book.

Following the ceremony the bride and groom left for an extended trip east. The bride's going-away gown was of tan two-tone crepe tailored affect with rosewood taffeta ruffles. Her hat was of rosewood felt with hand-made flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Landry will make their home at the handsome new Andrew Jackson hotel in Nashville, Tennessee.

Surprise Wedding Unites Miss Gaines and Maj. Keeley

A surprise wedding of wide interest, not only in army circles but throughout the entire south, was that of Miss Elizabeth Agnes Gaines, of Jacksonville, Fla., to Major Harry James Keeley, of Fort McPherson, which was solemnized at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, July 15th, at the home of Major and Mrs. Grady W. Jones at Camp McClellan, Ala., Chaplain McNally performing the ring ceremony.

Miss Gaines was attractively gowned in a beautiful costume of duchesse satin fashioned along the bouffant lines with a panel of real lace down the front of the skirt, which was sculptured around the bottom. The waist was tight-fitting with a yoke of rose-point lace (a family heirloom). There was a pearl ornament at the waist.

She wore a veil of duchesse and rosepoint lace caught at the head with a bandeau of orange blossoms and falling into a long court train. The veil was brought from Paris by the bride. Her bouquet was a corsage of lilies and the only ornament was a string of pearls.

Maj. Keeley was in full dress uniform.

The attendants were Captain and Mrs. E. W. Leard. Mrs. Leard wore a gown of pink, with Porto Rican handwork done in baskets in the front and back and trimmed with a French blue decoration at the hip. Her hat was a leghorn faced in pink with two big flowers on one side—one of pink and one of blue. Captain Leard also wore a full dress uniform.

The other witnesses to the secret wedding were Major and Mrs. Jones. Mrs. Jones wore a gown of cream lace and pink satin.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom and attendants participated in a big post reception in honor of General Wells of Fort Benning.

Mrs. Keeley is a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Travis Gaines, prominent residents of Jacksonville, Fla., and has won a host of friends throughout the section by her pleasing personality and gracious and pleasing manner. She attended the Von Unschuld university in Washington, D. C., and later was student at the Damrosch conservatory in New York city.

Maj. Keeley is a popular officer at Fort McPherson, but at present is stationed at Camp McClellan with a group of army officials training in army maneuvers. He is a native of Chicago, Ill., and graduated from West Point in the class of 1911.

The couple will be at home to friends at Fort McPherson after October 1.

A House Is a Box

LONG ago the dictum was laid down: "A house must first of all be a box." If that be true, then it is equally true that it is at once the task and the joy of the woman of the house to make its "boxiness" disappear, and in its place a radiant and beautiful abode magically to appear, a sweet and comfortable home.

This she does by her own luminous presence in the house, and by her natural gifts in selecting and utilizing Rugs, Draperies and Furniture.

Let us consider Furniture. Broadly speaking, it is divided into two kinds:—meritorious and meretricious. Of the latter there is no end. It is made as fast as sawmills can chop the timbers, as rapidly as indifferent and malingering workmen can knock it together. The painters and varnishers do the rest, giving falsehood a beautiful outside, deceiving by ornament.

The papers are full of such Furniture. No wonder thoughtless people are caught by it, for it presents a puzzling paradox. It is at once preposterously cheap and appallingly extravagant. They are caught because the extravagance is not manifest until time and service have worked their wrack.

Happiness dwells not in a home so furnished. The mellow spirit of contentment sours and curdles under the constant and rasping reminder of flimsiness degenerated into ugliness, dearly bought and paid for.

Meritorious Furniture? One thinks of Keats' line to a Grecian urn. It is a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Made of woods cut from noble trees, duly seasoned, by craftsmen who have put the dignity of honest workmanship in it—a quality as ineradicable and permanent as the personality of a living being. Indeed, is not love expressed objectively in work a living thing?

This is the sort of Furniture in the High August Sale, starting Monday next. Every stick is sound, every design a pure adaptation of something classic as done by the Master Furniture Builders.

This is our first August Sale. It offers some $200,000 worth of Furniture that Time cannot wither nor Custom stale. It will be sold on convenient terms, if you desire—a plan enabling everybody to use the vast resources and great economies of this event to the utmost of their practically unlimited possibilities.

BEAUTY CHATS BY EDNA K. FORBES.

DARKENING THE LASHES.
A great many women would be quite lovely if they knew some way of emphasizing their eyes. An old

Make this black cream.

5 Peoples Gas, Chicago ... 1174 117 117
trick, but one not well enough known, is to wear a color the exact shade of the eyes or a shade or so darker somewhere near the face—a blue tie, or a blue lined hat, or some bit of blue trimming for blue eyes, brown for brown eyes, etc. But that is not quite enough.

Well shaped eyebrows also bring out the eyes; those can be trained by brushing them every day, by pinching them into a nice line with the finger tips, and by rubbing them with tonic if they are too thin. Dark eyebrows bring out the eyes; naturally light ones can be darkened a very little by rubbing them with castor oil, which by the way, is very good for them, or they can be, occasionally when you want to look particularly nice, touched up with a dark eyebrow pencil.

But the eyelashes are most important, for the longer and thicker and darker they are, the larger and more expressive they make the eyes. You cannot dye them, you cannot use tonics, except oils and creams, and thick creams are too heavy these summer days. But you can make up a light cream that will darken them until it is washed off, and that won't feel heavy and that is perfectly harmless.

You do it by holding a candle under a piece of glass and smoking it up until you have a large amount of fine soot, about a teaspoonful. Put it in a tiny jar or pomade pot, and mix with it about an equal amount of white petroleum jelly or cold cream. You want a thick cream, quite black. In Paris I once paid the equivalent of $1.25 for half an ounce of an eyelash cream that was nothing but this mixture when I analyzed it.

Uncle Sam's Foreign Policy Is Defended By U. S. Official Before Political Institute

Harvard University Professor Lauds Refusal of Nation To Recognize Government of Russians

Williamstown, Mass., July 30.—(AP.)

The foreign policy of the country came prominently before the institute of politics today with a state department representative its proponent and a prominent historian its commentator. The former, William R. Castle, chief of the eastern European division, declared that the United States was determined upon the funding of all foreign war debts and was "no shylock." Recognition of the soviet government of Russia, Mr. Castle rejected on grounds that that government was linked with the third international and has carried on worldwide destructive propaganda.

Professor A. C. Coolidge, of Harvard university, followed Mr. Castle at an open conference on American foreign policy. It was easy to understand European enmity toward America, he said, and there was much to excuse resentment at her new immigration policy, her turning her back on the league of nations, and her exclusion of Japanese.

German Efforts Cited.

The government's great problem, according to Mr. Castle, was to distinguish between real and permanent interests from real and permanent ones. Its policy was pledged to helplessness toward Europe without imperialist interference, cooperation without entanglements, avoidance of promises which could not be filled, and the scrupulous fulfillment of engagements.

Mr. Castle said in part:

"The American government insists that these debts be formally recognized through the negotiation of funding arrangements. It believes that this will lead toward stability, since a nation, like a man, is far more willing to work effectively and honestly when the full extent of obligations is known and admitted and a possible method of payment has been devised. There are many who believe that a large measure of the blame for the chaotic economic conditions in Germany during the post war years was due to the fact that Germany had no idea of the total bill which must be paid. When the Dawes plan made this clear and also dictated a possible method of payments, conditions immediately improved. The funding of the British debts to America was one of the very important steps in the British return to the gold standard."

Defends Foreign Policy.

The United States cannot become a party to the European security pact, Mr. Castle asserted, but it can study and criticize or applaud the plans of the nations of Europe to live in peace. As to loans by bankers, the government was willing that these should be made for constructive purposes, but not for building up armament. A loan to Russia was against public policy, and likewise recognition of the soviet regime was not to be considered.

"The United States," he said, "does not pretend to dictate the form of government which any country should have, but it does not propose to recognize any government which repudiates its international obligations and interferes with the economic and political systems of other countries. If Russia were a democratic republic or a democratic monarchy instead of the despotism which it is, we should not recognize its government if we had evidence that it was employing agents to stir up trouble in our own country. The claims of those who attempted to differentiate between the activities of the soviet government and those of the Russian government are unfounded."

COMMON HOUSEHOLD MEDICINES

Otherwise known as "simples" have for centuries been derived from medicinal roots and herbs. They are still used and recognized by many of our best physicians as unequalled for certain ailments. In many countries roots and herbs are cultivated purely for their medicinal value. It is said that the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., of Lynn, Mass., is the greatest user of crude herbs in this country. The success of their Vegetable Compound for ailments of women is now world-wide, and it will certainly pay any woman who suffers from any ailment peculiar to her sex to try it. (Adv.)

WOOD IS SILENT IN DIVORCE ACTION

Tampa, Fla., July 30.—(Osborne C. Wood son of Major General Leonard Wood, governor general of the Philippines, declined to discuss the impending suit for divorce filed by his wife at Wilmington, Del., yesterday, more than to say that he did not intend to return to the proceedings.

Mrs. Wood, according to dispatches, brought the action in Maryland superior court but the grounds on which it was based has not been disclosed.

When approached on the subject he said:

"I have nothing whatever to say."

It is recalled that he showed the same reticence in discussing his domestic affairs when he arrived in Tampa last spring on the shipping board freighter West Chetac. Later he said he had no intention of contesting the divorce.

The son of the eminent soldier leader has been the center of much publicity since it was learned more than a year ago when he "bucked" Wall Street and made close to a million dollars. He was in the Philippines at the time.

Shortly afterward he went to Europe and there occupied the spotlight because of gay parties. The notoriety, he said, was undesired for he was nothing unusual about his conduct.

Mrs. Wood, before her marriage to the young army officer was a Philadelphia social girl. She now lives sequestered at her cottage at Southampton, L. I., according to dispatches, and her parents are at Cape May, N. J.

DIVORCE COURT ENDS

Fifty Petitions Are Considered at Meeting Thursday.

After hearing about 50 petitions for divorce Thursday, Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, completed the docket, containing 230 cases, which he began Monday and adjourned the July term of Fulton county divorce court.

The whole docket was called. A few of the cases were thrown out on account of insufficient evidence, but most of them stood the test of the court, and Judge Thomas ordered decrees.

All the cases set for hearing were uncontested.

The Convention Wednesday on the farm of J. O. Moore. Both speakers were heard with marked attention by the large number of farmers who came to the meeting. S. D. Truitt, county agent, arranged the meeting and presided.

The principal speech on the subject treated at the farmers' meeting was delivered by Professor Appleton, who made a deep impression on his hearers who have been thoroughly awakened to the fact that soil building is an important matter for farmers of the county to consider at this time, if the county is to return to its former position of prestige among the more outstanding agricultural counties in the state.

The speech of Mr. Unshaw was along the same line of that of Professor Appleton, although he did not go as largely into detail as did the feed crop specialist.

New York, July 30.—(AP)—Uneven price movements characterized today's curb market, which was featured by the sensational rallies of Power Corporation of New York and St. Regis

Establishment of a new peak price by E. & W. Grand Stores, which advanced 3 points to 8, was one of the

Mother Frantic for Child Reported by Father as Killed

ONLY SON DISAPPEARS WITH FATHER

Macron, Ga., July 30.—Mrs. T. J. Barron waited in terror tonight for word of the fate of her only child, Henry, whom she reported to county officers to be missing with her husband.

Wednesday morning Barron dropped out of sight, with three children, Elijah and Elsie, twins, by a former marriage, and a son, Henry, by her second marriage, a letter, postmarked Sycamore, Ga., in which she was informed by her husband that her only son had been killed in an automobile wreck.

Youth in Geneva Rare Fish Found Admits Slaying On Long Voyage American Woman To Sargasso Sea

Geneva, July 30.—Sixteen-year-old John Hammer-Schlegel, an Austrian, confessed the murder of Mrs. M. M. Bowen, a wealthy American woman, following his arrest for the crime. The boy said he had intended to rob Mrs. Bowen, but that he had been frightened and had fled from the scene.

Mrs. Bowen's body was found near the boundary between the Basle and Soleure cantons. As neither cantonal authorities had jurisdiction for murder, it is probable that Hammer-Schlegel will be sent to a reformatory. His bullet struck the American woman in the throat, but she was able to crawl about 100 yards before her strength was exhausted. An autopsy performed in Basle Thursday established that death occurred from loss of blood. The wound was found on the left side of the neck, and the course of the bullet indicated that Hammer-Schlegel had fired from a high tree.

Police and dogs searched the vicinity of the crime before Hammer-Schlegel's arrest, particularly scouring the nearby ruins of Dornach castle. It is understood that Mrs. Bowen came to Switzerland to take a cure in the Societe Anthroposophique, a religious movement founded by Rudolf Steiner, an Austrian, who died here 10 months ago. She was 36 years old.

President Calls Madden for Talk On Tax Reduction

Swampscott, Mass., July 30.—The actual work of slashing government expense for the purpose of making possible President Coolidge's much discussed second tax reduction bill will start Friday in the study library of the summer white house.

Representative Martin S. Madden, of Illinois, chairman of the all-party house appropriations committee, who is given the job of drafting the money supply bills for the operation of the government, has been summoned to White Court for a short conference.

Madden's job is to keep the total of the appropriation bills, to be introduced in congress next winter, under the mark of $3,080,000,000, which Mr. Coolidge has set as the maximum. This figure for the expenditures for the fiscal year beginning July 1, is less than $100,000,000 below the amount appropriated for the present fiscal year.

These figures cover all federal expenses except the postoffice department which is almost self-sufficient. Madden's committee will meet at Washington in September or early in October to draft the supply bills. The request of the government department has been before the budget bureau for several weeks and the appropriation committee will inspect and hear hearings on the departmental demands, which will be released on August 1.

Whether Madden's committee will be able to hold the figure below the maximum is a matter of uncertainty. Besides the regular supply bills there is a great deal of pressure for enactment of the $150,000,000 government building program for inland and coastal waterways. Several bills will be introduced aimed at taking considerable sums from the treasury for these purposes and it will be difficult to prevent their passage.

MAJOR CONFESSES ATTACKING GIRL; AGAIN ARRESTED

Hickory, N. C., July 30.—(AP)—Major Wade W. Bowman, of Hickory, commanding officer of the second squadron of the North Carolina cavalry, was held without bail this afternoon following his arrest on a warrant charging him with a statutory offense upon a 13-year-old girl, the daughter of a prominent Hickory citizen.

The alleged crime was committed last Tuesday night, according to the warrant. Major Bowman was arrested Tuesday night and an investigation made. Upon the statements of two local physicians, the original charge of felony was amended to cover a lesser offense, and he was released on bond. To this charge he pleaded guilty at a hearing before City Recorder August 2, Wednesday morning and prayer for judgment was suspended until August 10, when he was to return from Fort Oglethorpe, for which place he was scheduled to leave here tomorrow morning with a local cavalry troop.

However, at the instance of the child's mother, Major Bowman was arrested this afternoon on the original charge and held without bail. Major Bowman declined to discuss the affair following his second arrest, though prior thereto he denied that he had committed any crime, saying that he was that which he is now charged. The alleged crime took place in the absence of his wife.

Police Confident They Will Find Stolen Automobile

Detectives who are investigating the theft of a valuable sedan reported stolen Sunday morning from the property of H. P. Murray, of Charlotte, N. C., Thursday night expressed confidence of the early apprehension of the car and drivers. Detectives A. Lamar Poole and S. A. Smith are conducting the investigation.

The car was checked at the desk of a local hotel by Mr. Murray, who was passing through Atlanta after a tour of Florida. Hotel officials sent the car to a nearby garage for storage and gave Mr. Murray the claim check.

Attempt at Escape At Benning Results In 1 Killed, 1 Hurt

Columbus, Ga., July 30.—Private Walter Parker, of Tipton, Ga., was killed and Private Joseph Summers was seriously wounded when the men who were prisoners, attempted to escape from Private Harvey Lane, military policeman, at Fort Benning, this morning.

Lane fired at Parker, who was hit in the head. The policeman was then said to have shot at Summers, one bullet taking effect in his back and one in his left arm. He was captured.

The two prisoners were at work at the post, cutting grass when the escape was attempted. They were in Private Lane's custody. Parker was a prisoner for being absent without leave and Summers was charged with fraudulent enlistment and attempted desertion. Benning officials said that Summers is an escaped convict from San Quentin prison, California.

Lane, who is said to have stated that he ordered the prisoners to halt several times before he fired, was not placed under arrest but a board of officers was appointed to make an investigation and it is considered probable that the policeman will be tried by courtmartial.

DecoMura Has Great Possibilities

One Atlanta woman had four tints of DecoMura's fifteen applied to her living room walls. She wanted to see what novel effect she would get.

Pale green covered the lower third of the surface. Then came a foot-wide wash of buff; a wider belt of gray; and a pink was used for the remainder. All four colors went on in irregular bands—not straight sections. The result is wonderfully beautiful—and quite out of the ordinary, of course. It is only one of countless ways in which DECO-MURA can beautify walls and ceilings.

This woman is delighted because it all was done with such ease and absence of fuss and fuss. DECO-MURA goes on like kalsomine, but without the drip and splash. It dries on hard, like paint. It will not chalk off, nor flake, nor crackle. And it costs so little.

READING SUICIDE MAY BE ATLANTAN

Reading, Pa., July 30.—(AP)—Police were awaiting word tonight from Atlanta, Ga., where it was said the man who ended his life in a hotel here Tuesday, leaving a note, "I am nobody from nowhere," answered the description of A. S. Crumley, of that city, who is missing.

Crumley was last heard of in Richmond, Va., from where he sent all belongings to his brother, and intended to be committed suicide. Reading police have no description of the Atlanta man.

Richmond, Va., July 30.—Richmond authorities have expressed the belief that the body which was found Tuesday night in a Reading, Pa., hotel might be that of J. S. Crumley, of Atlanta, who disappeared from that city about a week ago after sending all of his belongings to a brother in Atlanta and signifying his intentions of committing suicide. It was first thought that the body was that of Russell Scott, brother of the convicted murderer, but later investigation following information received that the dead man does not answer to Scott's description.

Police say that the description of the man found dead at Reading does fit Crumley. Apparently he had committed suicide and left a note saying, "I am nobody from nowhere."

A. S. Crumley, of Atlanta, Ga., has arrived in this city to assist "Richmond" detectives in the search for his brother, who mysteriously disappeared last Thursday from his room at 933 West Gate street.

Mrs. Theodore Cory, wife of a prominent member of the coal family of that name in England, and who writes under the pen name of Miss Winifred Graham, has just had her forty-first book published.

Crime Situation At Revolt Stage, Jurist Declares

Chicago, July 30.—"The crime situation has come to the point where it is a matter of time before it will erupt into a full-scale revolt," declared Chief Justice Jacob Hopkins, of the criminal court, made this assertion in commenting Thursday on the dramatic raid on the Drake hotel here, in which two bandits and a clerk were slain and guests terrorized at one of Chicago's greatest hostilities.

In an interview describing the crime wave in America as "the most important internal situation that now confronts the nation," the jurist suggested:

"That business men organize to fight crime, 'even to the extent of forming vigilantes.' That armed gunmen should be shot on sight."

"That 'punishment should be swift, certain and sure.'"

"It is as bad as the old days in 'Frisco when citizens took the law into their own hands and drove out undesirable.'"

"That many judges are employed in trying property rights, when more important work lies in the crime situation. The country should declare a moratorium on civil business, if necessary, to provide enough judges to clear up the criminal calendar."

Hopkins condemned a "nickel nerving policy" which he said prevented adequate facilities for prosecution. In stressing the demand that gunmen be shot on sight he said that "it is now a question of who should be shot first, the officers of the law or the criminals."

SPECIAL PROGRAMS TO BE PRESENTED BY CITY MOVIES

Plans for the Greater Movie Season, which is to start in Atlanta and eighteen other "key" cities all over the country next Monday, are rapidly being completed. Special programs have been arranged for all Atlanta theaters for the month of August.

Great interest is being taken in this plan as evidenced by the fact that numerous Atlanta theaters have requested printed matter on the subject for the purpose of enclosing it in their daily mail.

It takes eight years to make a star. With few exceptions the favorites of today required that length of actual film work to attain their present positions, and in many cases years of stage experience preceded their screen debut, according to casting directors who have watched the rise and fall of players ever since the first hope of a popular audience, a studio gate. Their observations form part of a general check-up on all film activities when the studios set in motion plans for the Greater Movie Season.

While exploring some romantic myths, the casting directors shed new light on the thoroughness of screen work. "Extra-gala Today—Star Tomorrow" is a popular conception, but entirely wrong. Tomorrow is more likely to be in 1933. The interval will be filled with study, work, improvement, and a constant striving to be the best that just eludes them. Heartbreaks, perhaps, moments of happiness and incessantly the struggle for permanent recognition that any artist, whether singer or sculptor must endure.

"We have no Cinderellas," one casting director remarked. The fairy story may be found on the screen, but very rarely behind it. Naturally the public likes to dream a little, to imagine that some girl strikes up suddenly out of a crowd, that she happens to be just the type we want; and that we either star her right away or give her a small part which she turns into an excellent one, so convincing that she overshadows the star. Believe me, that never happens. If motion pictures depended upon sudden discoveries for talent, the industry would be back where it was fifteen years ago."

LA FOLLETTE SON WITTNER STOPS EVOLUTION CASE

Madison, Wis., July 30.—(AP)—Robert M. La Follette, Jr., will seek the seat in the United States senate, mad, vacant by the death of his father. He announced his candidacy here today and said he would issue a "complete statement" later.

"I am a candidate for United States senator. In a short time I shall issue a complete statement of my views. This announcement followed a series of conferences with Wisconsin political leaders and came a few days after the senator's widow announced she would not seek the seat made vacant by her husband."

Mrs. La Follette will devote her time to completing her husband's biography, which she has been writing for a large part in the direction of the La Follette "residential" campaign last year. He is 30 years old.

Simultaneously with the La Follette announcement, rumors of a "secret treaty" were heard in political circles. It is reported that La Follette, Governor Blaine and Attorney General Sherman L. Ekmann have entered into a "truce."

According to an authoritative source, this agreement calls for Governor Blaine to throw his support to La Follette in the special election, and that in turn the progressive strength will be united upon Blaine and Ekmann in 1926 in the state campaign.

It is understood to be agreed by the trio that Governor Blaine will be a candidate in 1926 for the United States senate, and that Ekmann will run for governor.

MAX POLLOCK MARRIES First Wife and Daughter Recently Electrocuted.

Max Pollock, of 183 Capitol avenue, a shoemaker, whose wife and 12-year-old daughter were accidentally electrocuted Monday afternoon, July 28, was married Thursday in New York city to Mrs. Dina Boloff, of that city, according to news received here, Thursday night.

Members of the family here had not heard of the wedding and do not know the new Mrs. Pollock, who is a widow, 45 years of age. Her first husband died in 1918.

Mrs. Rosa Pollock, the first wife, and her daughter, Edith, 12, were killed instantly by electricity while they were hanging on the gallows of the yard of their home. Mrs. Pollock grasped the charged wire. Her little daughter bravely rushed to her assistance and was killed when she attempted to pull her mother from the wire.

MORTUARY A Word of Comfort.

Charles P. Steinmetz was a cripple from birth and was always a dwarf in stature. It is hard to imagine any difficulties or handicaps from which he did not suffer yet he attained preeminence as a scientist and was made president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

When your lot seems hard and lonely, think of him and take courage. If he could triumph in the face of such terrific odds you can fulfill your tasks bravely too.

—FREDERICK G. BUDLONG.

Pastor Files $15,000 Suit For Slander

The Rev. B. F. McCoy, pastor of the North Atlanta Baptist church, Thursday entered suit in Fulton county superior court for $15,000 damages for slanderous remarks alleged to have been made by J. S. Wells, said to be a member of the petitioner's church. According to the petition, Wells was engaged in conversation June 6 with the Rev. T. J. Tribble, and N. I. Silas, also a member of the McCoy congregation, and made the following "untrue, slanderous and premeditated" remarks:

"You think so much of old man McCoy. You want to tell you something you don't know about him. He has whipped and abused his poor wife and sent her to the asylum and she wrote him to come and get her for she was no more crazy than he was."

Mr. McCoy declares this charge is without foundation, that his reputation has been injured, and that he has been held up to ridicule before his friends and members of his church although he has been a Baptist minister for 40 years.

The suit was filed by Attorney T. G. Lewis and the law firm of Scott, Hornbuckle & Moore.
